Meg,

Thanks for your letter. Sims' cooperation in this matter, and provision of an approvable SSAP, is much appreciated. As to the scope of sediment analysis, we agree the coming sampling results, including observed scrap metal impacts, will provide us a better understanding of the impact of activities "proximate to Sims' ship-loading Conveyor" (CD ¶12). What is "proximate" is numerically undefinable until we see those sample results. Until then we simply do not know what the dimensions are of the area impacted by Sims' ship-loading activities. We also agree that "determinations may be technically complex, and may necessitate additional sampling."

We look forward to working with Sims in implementation of the SSAP in the near future.

Sincerely,

Rich

Hi, Rich,

Please see the attached letter regarding EPA's recent approval of the Final SSAP. Sims appreciates EPA's conditional approval, and will be contacting Juliet in the near future to coordinate on implementation. As discussed in the attached letter, there is one issue we wanted to note for the record. I'll be out of the office tomorrow and on Monday, but let me know if you think there is a need to discuss. Thanks, Meg
